MESSAGE FROM FATHER BROWN

The first reading for the Masses of this week-end comes from Amos, one of the Hebrew prophets to whom we refer as "Minor," mainly because the volume of their writing is minimal compared to the larger works of writers like Ezekiel, Daniel, Jeremiah, and Isaiah. However, today's passage fits very well to its purpose, which is to "set us up" for the Gospel selection in which Jesus calls His original Twelve Apostles and "missions," that is, sends them on their own to proclaim the Good News to people who have not yet heard it.

From time to time in these weekly columns, I like to highlight the lives and work of non-biblical people who have also been influenced by the call to receive and to spread the message of the Gospel. And, as often as not I look for these examples on the calendar dates close to the time of the bulletin for which I am writing. Today, we commemorate Saint Kateri Tekakwitha, one of two indigenous people of North America to be canonized thus far in the twenty-first century. She was a member of the Mohawk tribe of New York State and neighboring Canada who lived and died nearly a full century before American Independence Day. She responded in faith to the instruction of missionaries of the Society of Jesus from France. Tomorrow, we remember Saint Bonaventure, a thirteenth century follower of Francis of Assisi, who served as Bishop in Italy and France, and whose scholarly writing influences the training of seminary students to this day.

Some of those trainees have become our priests and educators and we remember them on the anniversaries of death in these summer days. Last Friday, we remembered a true giant of Kentucky Catholicism: Most Reverend John B. David, the first of three bishops who served as Auxiliary to Bishop Flaget; Bishop David died in 1841. Today, we remember Fathers Thomas Duerr and Robert Dollinger. Father Duerr was Superintendent of the Catholic School System in our Archdiocese; Father Dollinger was Chaplain to the Boy Scouts of America and Pastor of Saint Thomas Parish in Bardstown. On Wednesday, we remember Father Joseph Miller one of the first Louisville priests to earn advanced university degrees; he taught courses in preaching at the seminary. The week wraps up with the fourth anniversary of a much-beloved pastor/teacher of Hardin County – Reverend Stanley Louis Osborne.

Today, we welcome a distinguished son of Saint Ambrose, Father Roy "Butch" Stiles, who has given over sixty years of faithful priestly service to our Archdiocese. Welcome to Father Stiles as well as his family and friends. You do us proud.
